TOMATO LIST

SEEDS, SEEDLINGS & FRUIT

A note from TNG+T

We have been growing heirloom tomatoes on our farm at Selbourne in Tasmania's beautiful Meander Valley since 2010. We grow seasonally and we grow in the soil, using organic and biological methods, because that's when food tastes best.

We produce more than 120 varieties of tomatoes each year, choosing our varieties firstly for taste, but also to provide a wide range of colour, shape, use and adaptability (to different conditions and garden sizes). This season, as well as providing all our old favourites, we will have a special focus on multi-colours.

Seedlings are raised in unheated poly tunnels, with only essential bottom heat for the plants themselves, because we want them hardy enough to survive the cool Tasmanian conditions.

We know you'll find something to suit your needs. If you need some help, please let us know.

DWARF TOMATO PROJECT

The DTP was set up to try and create a bigger range of open-pollinated dwarf varieties of tomatoes. With a team of over 300 volunteers across USA and Australia and after many years of trials, they have now released nearly 70 stable varieties of compact, heavy cropping dwarf varieties, ideal for small spaces (and for saving your own seed).

You can read more about the DTP at www.dwarftomatoproject.net
